For small businesses that have relatively simple accounting needs but want a reasonable billing solution, we recommend a review of the best guide to billing software. FreshBooks are much easier to install than fast books and you can try it for free for 30 days. Visit FreshBooks That invoice templates should include a sales invoice is a document that provides your customer with all the important details of the products and services they have purchased from you. To make sure that payment is not delayed, you want to make sure that your contact information and customer contact information is accurate. You should also include the invoice number, the date of the billing, and the following information: What products/services do you bill them for How much each product/service is worth the payment date Is acceptable payment methods Contact details for the questions listed below, ten key fields that should be included in all invoice templates: 1. The name of your company and contact information your invoice templates are listed on the Internet, must include all of the information that your customer should receive. This includes, but is not limited to, the following: Company Name Postal Address (where you would like payments to be sent) Physical address (note: include only if customers will have to pick up products, and it is not the same as your mailing address above) Phone Number 2 Site Address. Customer Name - Contact Information Your invoices should include all customer contact information, such as: company name Mail Address Email Address Website 3. All invoices must be given a unique invoice number. If you use accounting software such as Fast Books, this number will be automatically created for you every time you create an invoice. However, if you do not use accounting software, you will need to manually assign an invoice number for each invoice you create for customers. Customers can refer to this number when they with you with questions and they can provide it on their checks when making a payment, so you can make sure the payments are applied correctly. 4. The date of the invoice as a whole is the date when the invoice was created and sent Customers. Ideally, you should email invoices to your customers to avoid delays between the time you create the invoice and the time you send it to the customer. If you use fast books, you can send invoices from the software. 5. The terms of payment terms of payment is the length of time you give your customers to pay you. The standard payment terms are a net 30 days, which means that the invoice must be billed within 30 days of the billing date. To help you choose which payment terms are right for you, check the best bill payment terms for your small business. 6. Customer ID/ account number Many small businesses assign a unique account number to each of their customers. If you assign an identification number to customers, be sure to include this information in all invoices you create. 7. Product/services Description of products/services purchased by your customers should be included in every invoice you create. This will help minimize the issues that customers may have and help you get paid faster. If the invoice is vague or unclear as to what you are charging the customer, the payment may be deferred, which will negatively affect your cash flow. 8. The cost of products/services I think it goes, of course, that you should include the cost of your services, so your customer knows how much they owe. Most importantly, make sure that the cost of the invoice is that you quoted your client to avoid any payment delays. 9. The amount at which the amount must be paid is the total amount that the customer owes for the products and services listed in your invoice. Again, it is important to make sure that this amount is correct to avoid any delays in payment. If you use accounting software such as Fast Books, the total amount to be credited is automatically calculated for you! 10. Acceptable payment methods For all invoices that you create should include instructions on how your customers can rearrange the payment. If you use accounting software like Fast Books, you can subscribe to Intuit Payments, so that every invoice you send via email will include a payment button that allows customers to make payments online using debit/credit card or bank account information. If you don't use accounting software, be sure to include instructions on where checks should be mailed or instructions on how to pay for a debit/credit card. 6 Steps to Import An invoice template in Fast Books Fast Books Online includes a standard template that can be modified to meet your individual needs.
